

We Decide

by Nathan Juhasz, ASPE

Marvelous characters storied in History's admissions

Or those hidden in mundanity's recluse

Progenitors of lofty achievements and ambitions

Or those indifferent to Man's strife and abuse

From farmlands to sky tops our kind are strewn

Observers of Time's march to universal fate

Evermore the reason to foster all life's beauty to bloom

Than bear the load of innate mortality and tremble at its weight

Magnanimity to greed, aggression to goodwill

Minds racked for Man's betterment or diminished to pursue immoral glee

People of triumph and change, or ones who lie still

It all depends on who we decide to be